Aziz’s Beach

It was a boiling hot summer day on the Cherry Tree Estate. Aziz and his friends were feeling grumpy. It was too warm inside. It was too warm outside. “What we need,” said Aziz, “is a beach!” His friends all started laughing. Aziz always had a crazy plan. “We live in a block of flats miles away from the beach!” giggled Aziz’s friend Leah, trying to hold back tears of laughter. “My dad is at work, and so is your mum. We could never get to the beach in a million years!”

But Aziz was not put off. First, he went to the builders, who were building a wall outside. “Please can I have some of your sand?” asked Aziz. “I’m making a beach,” he told them proudly. The builders started chuckling so hard they nearly fell over. “You’ve made our day with that,” sniggered one of the builders, “and just for that son, you can have this bag of sand!”

Next, Aziz went to the shop on the corner. It was a treasure trove that sold everything, from rubber rings to tins of beans. “I don’t have any money,” sighed Aziz to the shopkeeper, “but I need a paddling pool. It’s not for me, it’s for a beach.” The shopkeeper beamed. “What a cheeky boy you are!” she chortled. “And just for your cheekiness, I will give you an extra large blow-up paddling pool and throw in some buckets and spades for free too. As long as I can visit your beach when it’s finished!” she smirked.

Aziz panted home, carrying his heavy load. On the way, he passed by a cheerful, tinkling ice cream van. The man in the van looked tired and bored.
Aziz’s Beach

“It is such a hot day but I haven’t sold so much as a lolly!” he complained. Aziz had an idea. “Excuse me,” said Aziz, peeking over the counter, “but if I can make a beach outside my flat, you will get a lot more customers.” The ice cream man rolled his eyes. “A beach! Around here! Fat chance, lad!” he shouted, shooing Aziz away. The ice cream man called after him, “The day I see a beach around here is the day I give away all my ice creams for free!” Aziz smiled to himself.

When he got home, Aziz saw his neighbour watering the plants outside her flat. “Please can I borrow your hose?” asked Aziz politely. By now, he knew just what to say... “It’s for a beach!” The neighbour was surprised but she did not laugh. “A beach is a serious business,” she said, handing over the hose solemnly, “but I don’t think you can do it alone.”

Day trips and holidays by the sea became very popular during the Victorian age. Railways and trains were much more common and people could travel longer distances more easily. Also, in 1871, a law was passed giving people certain days of the year off work. On these days, people who worked in the factories and offices in towns would often take their family to the seaside for the day.

Why did people go to the seaside?
The towns and cities in the Victorian age were often polluted places. Many people worked in factories. These factories produced lots of smoke from burning coal to make the machinery work. The workers and their families, who lived close by, would breathe in all this smoke and grime, often making them poorly. People believed the air at the seaside was much cleaner and that paddling in the sea was good for their health.

What did people do at the seaside?
People enjoyed many different activities at the seaside during the Victorian age.

Punch and Judy shows are puppet shows that are performed from a little tent outside on beaches or piers. They became very popular in the Victorian age when the puppeteers - the person who controls the puppets - began travelling on the trains to the seaside to entertain the working-class families.

Read this story The Wind and the Sun and answer the following questions.

The Wind and the Sun

The wind and the sun were arguing.

‘I am the king of the sky,’ boasted the wind. ‘I can rip up trees and blow ships off course. Nothing is as strong as I am!’

‘You?’ scoffed the sun. ‘I am much stronger than you. I can turn ice into water and I warm the earth and make plants grow!’

Their argument continued until the sun said, ‘Let’s have a competition to see who is the strongest.’

‘OK,’ said the wind. ‘What do I have to do?’

‘Do you see that man on the road down there?’ asked the sun.

The wind looked down to the road. There was a man walking along. He was wearing a thick coat and a scarf.

‘Yes,’ replied the wind.

‘Well, whoever can remove the man’s coat from his back is the strongest.’ said the sun.

‘That’s easy!’ shouted the wind. ‘Just watch me, I’ll blow his coat off!’

The wind began to howl. The trees bowed down before his might. The fallen leaves whipped around the man’s legs, but the man just pulled his coat closer around him. The wind grew angrier. He blew until the branches began to crack, but still the man kept his coat, holding on tightly to keep warm.
The Wind and the Sun

‘I give up!’ huffed the wind. ‘I can’t blow anymore.’

The sun crept out from behind a cloud.

‘It’s my turn,’ he said.

The sun did very little. He sat in the sky, sending his rays down to the man. Soon his rays began to get too warm for the man and he took off his scarf. The sun continued to sit in the sky, sending his rays down to the man. Soon the man undid his coat buttons. The sun continued to send his rays down to the man, and a short while later, the man became so warm that he took off his coat.

‘I win!’ exclaimed the sun.
